At Stonehill, the American Studies major is built upon our belief that the study of American society and culture, as well as the history of the field of American Studies, allows students to develop skills in critical inquiry, communication, cultural knowledge and self-reflection that in turn engender their desire to advance social justice.

American Studies majors have the opportunity to draw upon the strengths of faculty in several departments, typically taking courses in History, English, Sociology, Communication, Political Science, Economics, Visual & Performing Arts and Religion, among others.
