RELIGIOUS STUDIES

Religious Studies at Stonehill is an interdisciplinary major that introduces students, in class and through travel, to religious traditions worldwide and to the ways in which those traditions have been studied. Courses focus on the beliefs and practices of communities and individuals throughout history and embrace virtually all aspects of human experience as expressed in history, art, literature, social organization, politics, scientific exploration and ethics.

CAMPUS RESOURCES

With a dedicated faculty, including three Louise F. Hegarty Excellence in Teaching Award recipients, and a low student-to-faculty ratio, students will experience extensive course offerings. Demonstrating the variety of approaches to the academic study of religion, some of these courses include “Religion & How to Create One,” “God Doesn’t Do Religion,” “Buddhist Ethics,” and “Jesus & Moral Decisions.”

Also, the Religious Studies Society is a student-led group where students gather to discuss all manner of religious topics. The society organizes trips to contemplative places of worship, holds on-campus events for students, and promotes a general discussion of religion and spirituality within the Stonehill community.

“Instead of looking at what you’re ‘supposed’ to believe, we go back to the text. Psychologically, it’s exactly what students should be doing. We want all our students to feel college is a safe time in which to ask questions.”

– Professor Mary Joan Leith
Chair of the Religious Studies Department
